Yakima, Washington

家-Home

Han Shan, you wandered in caves by choice caring not if they carved your poems content to not let us know your name the Tao tricked you leaving us volumes to wade through

This isn't Shang Hai, nor a dynasty but we have the invisible.

Nobody knows how much choice forces their wandering. We only know they fought our wars they had a fight at home their mom had cancer nobody was there to give them their meds

Han Shan you wandered by choice We all wander by choice but we grieve when that's all they do when it is too cold outside we grieve when that's all they do when they can't eat we grieve when they can't find their way home
